Walsh: 'We've never seen snow like this'

Buried. Schools shut, roads closed and crime down as city lies six feet under.

Plows, shovels and elbow grease as Bostonians cope with massive snowfalls Monday. / NICOLAUS CZARNECKI, METRO

Again? As much as two feet of snow hammered Massachusetts Monday.

The third major snowfall in recent weeks confirmed Boston is in the midst of the snowiest month in its history, surpassing a record set in 1978, when a once-in-a-generation storm slammed the city.

"We've never seen snow like this," Boston Mayor Marty Walsh said on Monday.

Boston Police Commissioner William Evans was probably alone among Bostonians when he quipped today by the Mayor's side: "I hope it snows every day."

Evans added: "Things have quieted down, obviously we haven't seen as many people out as we normally do. We have seen a good reduction … crime has been real slow."

The snow prompted the MBTA to suspend all rail services Monday night and all day Tuesday, meaning there will be no subway, commuter rail or trolleys.

Some parts of the city saw more than 20 inches fall by Monday afternoon. They could see more than two feet before the storm ends. Some parts of the city have seen more than six feet of snow during the last two-plus weeks.

Walsh said snow removal costs could be double the city's annual $18 million budget by week's end. He implored local residents to stay home and off the roads Tuesday and for employers to allow their workers to work from home.

Public schools are shut Tuesday, and Walsh said children may need to make up lost classroom days during holidays or spring vacation. "I'm open to anything," he said.

The collective bargaining agreement between the city's schools and a teachers union states that teachers are not supposed to be teaching in classrooms past June 30. Interim Boston School Superintendent John McDonough said he was in talks with the union about that situation.

Walsh hinted he'd make a decision on makeup days Tuesday.

The T, running on a reduced schedule because of the snowstorm, had been beset by delays all day Monday.

T service has been criticized recently as the region has been buried with snow. Motors in many of the T's aged subway cars were incapacitated by snow and cold. Monday morning, a Red Line train got stuck between Quincy Center and Quincy Adams after a third rail froze. Delays plagued all lines.

Salt shortage

The repeated storms are starting to take a toll on supplies of road salt in the Northeast, with Morton Salt, one of the largest U.S. salt suppliers, running behind on some customer orders, spokeswoman Denise Lauer said.

- "Supplies have been challenged," Lauer said, adding that a complicating factor has been that many of the trucks the Chicago-based company would contract to deliver salt have been pressed into service for snow removal. REUTERS

Unhappy boss

Baker frustrated with MBTA

Frustrated by the MBTA's inability to operate even a limited schedule during Monday's snowstorm, Gov. Charlie Baker said he'll meet transit chiefs after the snow stops.

"Let's face it. This can't happen again," Baker said Monday. "It's been very difficult to count on the representations that have been made by the T over the course of the past few weeks. The first time that happens you can blame it on the weather, but after a while it starts to feel like something more."

Baker said he did not think MBTA officials had lied to him.

"No. I think they told me exactly what they thought was to be the case; it just didn't turn out to be true," Baker said. SHNS

Activists vow to keep up pressure on Cosby

Cosby no-show. Locals say they'll continue protesting after Bill Cosby canceled his Boston gigs Sunday.

Bill Cosby's decision to cancel two Sunday night shows at the Wilbur Theatre by blaming the snowstorm has left local domestic violence activists dubious.

"It might have been due to the pressure of the media and the interviews we've been having," said Brandie Alexander, who helped organize protests against Cosby's Feb. 8 shows. "I consider this a success."

On Sunday, actress Helen Gumpel, formerly known as Helen Selby, said Cosby made sexual advances and lewd gestures toward her in 1988, while she was on the set of his eponymous TV show.

Cosby has denied multiple allegations of sexual assault and harassment, and has not been charged with a crime.

"No need to worry, I will be back soon to raise the roof with laughter. I thank you, the theatre staff, the event organizers and the Boston Community for your love and support," Cosby said in a statement canceling the Wilbur shows.

Alexander said Cosby can expect local protesters to turn out in full force if he books another gig in Massachusetts.

"We're going to keep it up, and if he does decide to come back to Boston, we will protest. We will have even more time to organize," she said.

Her group, which has been active on a Facebook page entitled "United with Survivors: Bill Cosby Boston Protest," planned to picket Sunday's performances, but with the cancellation, they instead decided to hold a showing of solidarity.

About 35 people turned out with signs and banners to hear from survivors of sexual violence.

Uber. Driver charged in Sunday North End attack

Uber driver Abderrahim Dakiri, 36, of Boston was charged accused of sexually assaulting a 30-year-old Boston woman early Sunday morning, Boston police said Monday, the second Uber driver charged in two months.

The car was heading to the North End when the alleged attack occurred, around 3:25 a.m. The woman told police that she and three friends were wrapping up a night out when Dakiri picked them up. The victim's friends were dropped off, but she remained in the car to be dropped in another location.

According to the victim, it was during that time period that Dakiri "indecently touched her several times."

The car dropped her in the North End, police said, where she called police with the help of a stranger.

"Our thoughts are with the victim of this terrible incident," said Uber spokeswoman Kaitlin Durkosh. The driver in question has been removed from the platform pending the ongoing investigation."

Dakiri holds a livery license from the Massachusetts Department of Motor Vehicles, Uber said.

Teen HPV vaccine does not spur riskier sex, study suggests

Counter to the fears of some parents (and a few doctors), teen girls who are vaccinated against the sexually transmitted human papillomavirus (HPV) do not go on to catch more sexually transmitted diseases than their peers, according to a new study.

Some parents have been hesitant to have their teens vaccinated for fear that they would be emboldened to have more, and riskier, sex — the kind that can put them at risk for sexually transmitted diseases (STDs).

"The vast majority of parents don't think this is an issue," said Dr. Anupam B. Jena, who's with the Department of Health Care Policy at Harvard Medical School in Boston. REUTERS

Abuse

Catholic priest under investigation

The Archdiocese of Boston has announced that it is placing a North Reading pastor on administrative leave during an investigation into an allegation of sexual abuse of a minor.

The alleged misconduct is said to have occurred in the late 1970s. The allegations involve Rev. Thomas M. Gillespie, the pastor of St. Theresa of Lisieux Parish.

The Archdiocese said it's notified law enforcement of the allegation.

Boston Yeti back with a shovel and a smile as snow hits city

Snow man. His fan base is growing as he is spotted being a good samaritan.

The Boston Yeti has been spotted once again, only this time, the beloved beast has been lending a helping claw to neighbors in need.

The Yeti, which apparently operates a Twitter handle under @BostonYeti2015, was snapped shoveling out a car as snow once again fell on a frustrated city.

His Twitter following has grown to more than 6,000 people since he first appeared on the scene last month.

So far, the Boston Yeti has played coy with Metro, and hasn't responded to a request for an interview. Our only question — will the Boston Yeti ever team up with Keytar Bear?

Ponzi scheme. Payout to Bernard Madoff victims climbs up to $7.2 billion

Bernard Madoff / GETTY IMAGES

The trustee liquidating Bernard Madoff's firm on Monday said he is distributing another $355.8 million to the swindler's victims, bringing the total payout to more than $7.2 billion.

Irving Picard, the trustee, said the payout began on Feb. 6, and covers claims by fraud victims with 1,077 accounts at the former Bernard L. Madoff Investment Securities LLC. Claimants will receive between $431 to $67.1 million.

Most of the payout comes from November settlements with the Herald, Primeo and Senator "feeder funds," which Picard accused of sending customer money to Madoff to further his Ponzi scheme.

The trustee said claimants on 1,160, or 52 percent, of the 2,216 accounts where he found valid claims have been fully paid.

Picard has recouped roughly $10.55 billion for Madoff victims, or about 60 percent of the estimated $17.5 billion of principal he estimates they lost.

Some of that money has been held back because of pending litigation, including by former Madoff customers who challenge Picard's authority to block their competing claims.

Picard has filed more than 1,000 lawsuits against feeder funds, and former customers he has labeled "net winners" because they took out more from Madoff's firm than they put in. REUTERS

Secret Service deputy director steps down

Blunders. It's the latest top-level departure this year after a series of high profile security lapses.

The deputy director of the U.S. Secret Service is leaving his post, the agency said on Monday.

A.T. Smith has accepted another position within the Department of Homeland Security effective Tuesday, the Secret Service said in a statement.

Smith has served as deputy director since April 2012 and was responsible for daily operations, including 6,500 employees, at the agency charged with protecting the president, it said.

"Deputy Director Smith has had an exceptional law enforcement career spanning nearly 29 years within the United States Secret Service. His contributions to the agency have been invaluable," said Secret Service Acting Director Joseph P. Clancy.

In January, the Secret Service forced aside four senior officials while another has opted to retire.

The departures represent a house-cleaning within top management. The Washington Post reported last month that some members of Congress had expressed concern to the administration about Smith's continued presence in the top leadership.

An independent review of the agency released in December cited a leadership crisis at the agency and recommended an outsider be brought in to challenge an insular culture. REUTERS

Same-sex couples marry in Alabama

Same-sex couples began marrying in Alabama on Monday despite an attempt by the conservative chief justice of the state's Supreme Court to block judges from issuing marriages licenses to gay men and women in open defiance of a January federal court ruling.

Action by the U.S. Supreme Court on Monday helped clear the way for Alabama to become the 37th state to allow same-sex couples to marry. But gay rights advocates said numerous counties took steps to avoid granting marriage licenses to same-sex couples.

In Birmingham, dozens of same-sex couples married at the courthouse and an adjacent park, where they were greeted by supporters supplying cupcakes along with a handful of protesters bearing crosses and Bibles. REUTERS

France. Gunmen fire on Marseille police as Prime Minister Valls visits city

Gunmen fired on a police car in Marseille Monday in what officials said was a drug-related incident, hours before a visit by French Prime Minister Manuel Valls to hail a drop in crime in France's second city.

Residents of the La Castellane neighborhood were told to stay indoors. A creche was evacuated as troops from the GIPN special forces unit were sent into the sealed-off estate.

Police Chief Pierre-Marie Bourniquel confirmed it was his vehicle that had been targeted. He had gone to the scene after residents reported they had seen armed men in the area. Bullets were embedded in a bank above his car, he said.

Police seized seven Kalashnikovs and around 20 kilograms of drugs, according to Interior Minister Bernard Cazeneuve, who was accompanying Valls. Finger prints and DNA traces were also found which could help lead to arrests, he added.

Caroline Pozmentier, deputy mayor of Marseille, said the authorities were "99.9 percent sure" the incident was related to drugs and score-settling, adding that she did not see a link with Valls' visit.

The prime minister said in a speech at the Marseille police headquarters that "the simple fact of wearing a uniform" now exposed officers to violence. REUTERS

President still weighing decision on arming Ukraine

Moscow. Sanctions imposed by the EU and United States have badly hurt the Russian economy.

President Barack Obama made clear he was some way from a decision on whether to arm Ukraine in its conflict against Russian-backed rebels, saying on Monday he still hoped for a diplomatic solution.

"The measure by which I make these decisions is: 'Is it more likely to be effective than not?'" Obama said at a news conference with German Chancellor Angela Merkel, who opposes providing Ukraine with weapons to fight separatists in its east.

Russia had violated a September peace deal by sending more tanks and artillery into eastern Ukraine, Obama said, adding that he and Merkel had agreed sanctions must stay for now and Moscow's isolation would worsen if it continued on its current course.

Merkel is due to meet with Russian President Vladimir Putin and Ukrainian President Petro Poroshenko on Wednesday with French President Francois Hollande, and European Union ministers held off tightening sanctions on Monday to give the talks a chance.

Merkel and Obama have come under fire from foreign policy hawks in the Republican-controlled Congress who want weapons sent to the Ukraine army.

The Senate and House unanimously passed legislation in December that authorized sending arms for Kiev. Obama signed the measure into law, but it gave him leeway over whether or when to implement it.

Congressional aides said on Monday lawmakers were working on legislation that would commit Obama to providing arms.

But Merkel made clear in Munich her opposition to arming Kiev.

"I understand the debate, but I believe that more weapons will not lead to the progress Ukraine needs. I really doubt that," she said. Obama has long been skeptical of arming proxies in places such as Syria and Ukraine, and "has not said anything ... to suggest he's moved on this issue," said Andrew Kuchins, director of the Russia and Eurasia program at the Washington-based Center for Strategic and International Studies.

Nine Ukrainian troops were killed in a 24-hour period over Sunday. Seven civilians also died, Kiev said on Monday.

Expert on Minsk talks

'I do not expect quick solutions'

Metro chats with Paul Ivan, an analyst at the European Policy Center in Brussels.

What is expected from this latest round of talks?
Much will depend on the willingness of President Putin to compromise. For the moment he doesn't seem willing to compromise and to respect Ukraine's territorial integrity, so I am rather pessimistic. This might as well become a meeting in a series of meetings.

Is it possible that the Russia-Ukraine problem will be solved then?
The Ukraine conflict has severely damaged relations between the West and Russia, so I do not expect quick solutions. Some agreement will hopefully be reached regarding eastern Ukraine but the breach in trust and the disregard to international rules is very serious.

Is it possible that Russia will be liberated from sanctions soon?
I do not expect a quick lifting of the sanctions. If a deal regarding eastern Ukraine is reached, some of the sanctions will be lifted if the deal will be properly implemented. Other sanctions will remain in place given that it's very unlikely that there will be agreement over Crimea. DMITRY BELYAEV, METRO WORLD NEWS

1 The second weddings are always the best

Johnny Depp and Amber Heard are, like, extra married now. After blindsiding gossipmongers last week with a surprise knot-tying in L.A., the happy couple headed down to the Bahamas as planned for a lavish, intimate ceremony on Depp's own island, Little Hall's Pond Cay. Photos over the weekend showed a lovely canopy set up on one of the island's several beaches, along with 24 chairs. "Amber did her own hair and makeup, and Johnny was as laid back as usual. But there has been a genuine glow about them since Wednesday, when they officially became man and wife," a source tells the Sunday Express. "They wanted to do it all again on the beach and ... [celebrate] with friends because they love the island and want it to be a continuing part of their lives together."

Depp's island has several beaches, so it's unclear which one hosted the blessed event, but I'm going to go out on a limb and guess it wasn't the one he previously named for ex-partner Vanessa Paradis. That would just be awkward.

2 Look out, Bieber. Kevin Hart is coming for you

Apparently for the upcoming — and sure to be not at all awful — roast of Justin Bieber, Comedy Central felt it needed someone who could relate to the boy of the hour on his own level. Enter equally diminutive comic titan Kevin Hart, who is stepping in as roast master for the event. "I don't normally do roasts, but I had to step out for my guy Biebs," Hart says in a statement. "It's his big 21. It's about to be Operation Roast Everyone's Ass." And while we appreciate Hart's enthusiasm, this feels like an incredibly safe choice, as the "Wedding Ringer" star is not known for any particularly negative slant in his comedy. Maybe the chances were too great that usual Friars Club go-to host Jeff Ross would reduce Bieber to tears before the first commercial break.

She says, 'Oh my God, I eat his canned soup all the time!' I thought that was very funny." And charming!

Interview. Jake Johnson has some bad news for serious fans of 'New Girl''s trademark drinking game

Midway through its fourth season, "New Girl" is still finding new situations to throw its loft residents into. We met up with Jake Johnson (Nick) at a party and chatted about what's ahead for the show, and naturally, our favorite drinking game came up (it was a party, after all).

Will we see more True American this year?
Absolutely. I think we'll see True American for as long as the show goes.

Are you an expert on the game at this point?
Here's the reality, and it's disappointing for fans who want it to be something it's not. I say this as an expert, because I've been in every True American scene, and I was there when it started: There are no rules.

You guys just make it up?
The guy who wrote the first one, Luvh Rakhe, came to set and said, "We haven't figured this one out. It's some sort of a drinking game." We all started saying things that we used to do in drinking games.

Catch "New Girl" Tuesdays at 9 p.m. on Fox.
NICOLE WILDER-SHATTUCK, FOX

Visit Metro.us to learn about the surprising romance on deck for Nick.

So you just throw in anything?
It's like the chop suey of drinking games. Anything you got, throw it in. If you're playing quarters and want to turn it into True American, you can.

Well, there's a president on the coin.
You have to say a president if you hit it, then you point to who drinks and that's your vice president. If they don't know the vice president of the president you named, they have to take two drinks.

What's coming up on the show?
Justin Long is coming back; Josh Gad is coming back. So we got some good stuff coming up. But I think the silent secret MVP of the show is Hannah Simone.

She always has the funniest reactions.
Face acting. I tease her about it. Because there's a lot of scenes where we're all there and Hannah doesn't have any lines, so I'll go, "Wonderful face acting!"

A little romance

We just saw Nick get dumped. What's coming up for him?
Nick's going to be single for a bit. I'd like to see Nick date a little bit. I'd like to see him find somebody. I just texted [showrunner] Liz Meriwether, "Maybe it's time Nick gets in a relationship." Hopefully she'll listen. I'd like to date someone who's a really good actor and do a bunch of stories with them.

No more Nick/Jess?
I think Nick and Jess should potentially end up together, but I don't think they should do it during "New Girl."

Really?
I think the show has got too strong of an ensemble for it to turn into a relationship show. I think it messes with the dynamics in a less entertaining way, personally. But I like Nick and Jess together. I just think they should find each other when Fox tells us this is our last season.

Katherine Heiny's book "Single, Carefree, Mellow" includes 11 short stories." / LEILA BARBARO

Katherine Heiny's 'carefree, mellow' writing journey

New release. The writer proves short fiction stories are still relevant.

The very first short story Katherine Heiny ever published was in The New Yorker. Her first book, "Single, Carefree, Mellow" has Lena Dunham — among others — raving. We called Heiny up to get inside the brain of this wildly talented fiction writer.

The short stories in your book all take ordinary experiences, like a children's birthday party, and turn them into something exciting. Do you have a habit of creating stories about people in real life?
Oh, all the time. Ordinary things are really interesting to me. If I'm watching a reality show, and people are fighting about who didn't get invited to a party, that's fantastic. I think if you pay close attention to everyday things, they are often funny.

How does your writing process work?
When I start writing, I get the first line of the story and it always stays in, but it doesn't always stay as the first line. But there's always one line that sticks with me, and the rest of the story will come over a few days. It takes me a month or more to write a short story. … I don't write chronologically; I write little scenes and then I put them together.

Most of your stories are about affairs. What makes you drawn to writing about forbidden love?
My husband is a former MI6 agent, and he was undercover for most of our relationship. I couldn't tell people what he really did. This whole secret life thing was just part of our lives, so that's part of it. The other part is that I'll start writing about something other than the affair, and then I'll add it in to round out the story.

Dream come true

So many writers dream of being published in The New Yorker. How did that come about for you?
I wrote this story while I was in graduate school and sent it all over the place. I got 31 rejection letters. Then a friend of mine said, "What did The New Yorker say?" I told her I didn't send it there. She said, "Katherine, you're supposed to send it there first." So I mailed it off on a Thursday afternoon, and they called Friday morning to accept it. I didn't even know the mail worked that fast. They took it and published it, not changing one thing. … It's like an urban legend or something.

Ryan Reynolds plays a nice murderer in 'The Voices'

Interview. The actor didn't want his animal-conversing psycho to be just a psycho.

In "The Voices," now on VOD, Ryan Reynolds portrays a man who thinks he can talk to his dog and cat. / LIONSGATE

If you're asking, Ryan Reynolds is a dog person. "But I'm only a dog person because they can be controlled," he tells us. "Cats hate me." That's a light way to start talking about his new film, "The Voices," in which he plays Jerry, a disturbed Midwesterner who's off his meds and, as such, talks with his dog and his cat (both voiced by him). Soon enough, and purely by accident, he's racked up a body count.

You had to chase this one down and talk with director Marjane Satrapi ("Persepolis") about casting you. How did you convince her?

I knew there were two other actors who had their hands up for it, who I would argue are much more critically acclaimed than I am. So I really had to get my s— together. I met with Marjane and gave her my take on the guy. One of the things I said was: If there's even one look of menace on Jerry's face, we lose the audience. She seemed to really latch onto that idea, that we have to trust him, we have to follow him and ostensibly care for him. Somehow she, I don't know, found me creepy enough to do the role.

There's something shockingly sweet-natured about the film. For one thing, the actual gore tends to be offscreen or obscured in the shots.

That's funny — some people find it gory. I think it's offset by Jerry's innocence and arrested development. He was traumatized at 10 or 11 years old, and he's still 10 or 11 years old when we meet him. It's also offset by the fact that there's this asexuality to him. That's important, especially since we're dealing with women in this movie. If there was a sexual component, the movie would be wholly unpleasant in every way, shape or form, and it would never see the light of day. He's the nicest serial killer you'll ever meet.

It's hard to classify how you portray Jerry: The film is semi-realistic, but at the same time, there's a heightened comedic quality to it.

But you can't think of it like that on set. I was trying to create someone who is three-dimensional and not this menacing, scary psychopath, because that's not what he is at all. For me, it just brings out those ideas about heroes and villains. They're given such a raw deal, villains, in movies, because they're always twisting some kind of mustache, figuratively. No villain on earth does that. They don't have a compulsion for evil; what they have is an opposing conviction that you don't agree with. That's interesting to me. I wanted to bring as much empathy to Jerry as possible. But he's a villain, to some degree. He's the guy you read about in the news and say, "Glad I didn't run into that freak." At the same time, we read those things in the news, and there's a narrative we fill in our own minds. We get to show who that guy is.

Bonus question

Like crazy

Like in "Buried," you spend a lot of the film acting by yourself, though here you're talking to animals.

The hardest part of that was on set, the crew thought I was nuts. I would do a technical rehearsal for the crew and I would act the dog and cat. But then when we shot it, I would only hear the dog and cat lines in my mind, and I would react to it. So if you walked on set for the first time, you would see a guy talking to himself in the middle of a living room and then yelling at things that aren't there. It was off-putting for some.

Valentine's Day treats for kids

Recipes. Surprise your littlest valentine with one of these easy-to-make sweet treats.

For you, Valentine's Day may conjure up promises of flowers, chocolates and, if you're lucky, a no-kids night out with your spouse. But it's a day kids get excited about, too — remember when you were a kid, how fun it was handing out valentines to everyone in your class? Or in middle school, sending your crush a carnation or rose? Celebrate the love you have for your kids with one of these recipes from two Pinterest favorites:

Cream-Filled Chocolate Heart-Shaped Cakes

Modified from Worth Pinning blogger Carrie Geddes

Ingredients:
For cake:
- Cake mix
- 1 cup water
- ⅓ cup vegetable oil
- 3 large eggs

For frosting and chocolate coating:
- ½ cup milk
- 2 tsp. flour
- ½ cup vegetable shortening
- ½ cup sugar
- ½ tsp. vanilla
- ½ cup powdered sugar
- ¼ cup mini chocolate chips

Directions:
Start with your favorite cake mix (Geddes uses Duncan Hines). Preheat oven to 350 degrees for metal or glass cupcake baking pans or 325 degrees for dark or coated cupcake baking pans. Grease sides and bottom of the baking cups with oil spray. Blend cake mix, water, oil and eggs in a large bowl. Pour batter into cupcake pan. Overfill the molds on purpose so the cake bakes over the tops so you can cut the tops flat with a serrated knife. Bake for 20 minutes. Let cool for 15 minutes.

For the frosting, whisk 1/2 cup milk and two teaspoons flour in a small saucepan over medium heat. The milk and flour will make a pasty gravy. Remove from the heat and allow to cool at room temperature. Cream 1/2 cup shortening and 1/2 cup sugar. Add the pasty gravy stuff and beat for five minutes. Add 1/2 teaspoon vanilla and 1/2 cup powdered sugar. Continue beating until fluffy.

Use a knife to carefully core each cupcake. Fill the centers with the cream. Melt 1/4 cup mini chocolate chips for the chocolate icing and dunk the bottom of each cupcake into it. Then thickly coat the tops of the cupcakes with the melted chocolate. Let the hearts set. Pipe the vanilla frosting to write "love" on top.

Sweetheart Cupcakes

Modified from Glorious Treats blogger Glory Albin

First, bake a batch of chocolate cupcakes using your favorite recipe or box mix. (There's a good one at glorioustreats.com.) Fill the liners to 1/2 inch below the top of the liner. While the cupcakes are baking, prepare the frosting by following the below recipe:

Ingredients:
- 1 cup (2 sticks) butter
- ¼ tsp. salt (if using unsalted butter)
- 4 cups powdered sugar
- 1 tsp. vanilla extract
- 2-3 tbsp. heavy cream, half and half or milk
- Pink food coloring

Directions:
Using an electric mixer, beat butter until it's completely smooth. Add salt, if needed. One cup at a time, add two cups of powdered sugar, beating after each addition. Add vanilla and beat to combine. Add the remaining two cups of powdered sugar, one at a time. Add an additional one to two teaspoons cream and pink food coloring. Continue to beat for another minute or so. The frosting should now be smooth and fluffy.

For the cutout cupcake assembly, use a serrated knife to cut off the top of the cupcake, using the top of the cupcake liner as a guide. Use a small heart cookie cutter to cut out a heart shape from the cupcake dome. Spread frosting onto the cupcake base, in a mounded shape. If desired, sprinkle the cupcake dome with powdered sugar. Place top back on cupcake and press down a bit.

Mealtime. Breakfast recipes your kids won't suspect are healthy

Science has no shortage of studies proving the lifelong effects of feeding your children healthy food. Not only does it help them develop healthy eating habits that last into adulthood, a 2013 behavioral study found that unhealthy diets can lead to behavior problems in kids.

If you think feeding your kids healthy meals is a lofty ideal because you don't have time and they won't like it anyway, Food Network nutrition expert Dana Angelo White wants to prove you wrong. Her new book, "First Bites," is full of recipes for babies and toddlers that busy parents can whip up in no time. Her healthy spins on kid favorites like mac and cheese, pizza and chicken nuggets are full of "superfoods" to make a meal both unprocessed and full of nutrients. Here, we share two yummy kid-approved breakfast recipes from the book. EL

Recipe

Dressed-Up Frozen Waffles with Pears and Honey

You don't always have to make breakfast from scratch. On super busy mornings, pop a whole grain waffle in the toaster. Make it special and boost the fiber with a one-minute sauce.

Ingredients:
- 1 frozen whole grain waffle, toasted
- 1 pear, peeled and chopped
- 1 teaspoon honey

Directions:
While waffle is toasting, prepare the sauce. Place chopped pear and honey in a small bowl. Microwave for one minute, until pear is tender. Stir and allow to cool for five minutes. Pour sauce over toasted waffle or on the side for dipping.

Recipe

Mango-Banana Almond Milk Smoothie

This creamy, dairy-free smoothie is full of fresh, fruity flavor. The potassium, vitamin B6 and other nutrients in the banana and mango make this a healthier and tastier treat than bottled or smoothie-shop drinks.

Ingredients:
- 8 ounces vanilla almond milk, unsweetened
- 1 small banana, sliced
- 1 cup frozen or fresh mango

Directions:
Blend until smooth.

Don't make these mistakes when emailing a professor

Online manners. Your instructor isn't LOL-ing at your messages.

Between email, social media and office hours, professors are more accessible than ever before. But that doesn't mean it's appropriate for students to address them the way they would talk to their friends and family.

"With undergraduates who are just coming out of high school, they aren't really thinking of the different levels [of etiquette]," says Holly Meng, the Director of Leadership Education at Temple University.

"They think that they can ask a teacher whatever they want."

Prior to joining Temple, Meng was a consultant and the founder of the Etiquette School of Grace, which provided etiquette training to international businesspeople. "Manners really affect people," Meng reminds us. "It's not just manners but reading people."

Meng shares these tips on how students can write professional emails.

Have a clear subject line

"I'd write your course number, your first and last name and then your subject, [e.g., Bio 101, Jane Smith, lab report]," Meng advises. "If you write something like 'Paper question,' the professor still doesn't know what paper, which class." It's important to remember that, especially in large lecture classes, professors can have dozens of students.

Lean toward formality

Meng advises students not to address a professor by his or her first name unless they are expressly invited to do so. "They are not your friends," Meng says. "Usually on the syllabus, they indicate whether or not they have a Ph.D. In that case, you can say, 'Dear Dr. so-and-so.'"

Remember to proofread

You don't want the professors grading you seeing emails riddled with spelling and grammar issues. Remember to proofread everything thoroughly before hitting Send.

Remember to think before you type. / ISTOCK

Holly Meng, Director of Leadership Education at Temple University, on the etiquette for emailing your college professors

Give thanks

"Normally, when a student is emailing a professor, they are asking for a favor," says Meng. "So say 'please' and 'thank you.' They are the magical words."

An academic email is also not the time for jokes. "Don't use things like 'LOL,'" Meng says.

In brief

Harvard receives record number of applications

A record quantity of students has applied to become part of Harvard College's class of 2019.

The Harvard Crimson reports that the school received 37,305 applications — which is both an all-time high and over 3000 more applications than it received last year.

Dean of Admissions and Financial Aid William R. Fitzsimmons told the paper that a new outreach program that targets low-income students combined with a recent $125 million gift from hedge fund manager (and alum) Kenneth C. Griffin dedicated to providing financial aid may have contributed to the bump in applications.

"It allowed us to once again reinforce that if you're someone of excellence, we're open to you," Fitzsimmons told The Crimson.

Making TB a thing of the past

There are nine million new cases of tuberculosis diagnosed each year, with three million people dying annually of the disease. Researchers at the Boston University School of Medicine are fighting to change that.

Jerrold Ellner is a BU School of Medicine professor and chief of Boston Medical Center's infectious diseases section. He and his team of internationally based scientists have received a seven-year, $21 million grant from the National Institutes of Health to find a way to determine which potential patients will develop an active case of TB while also determining when a successful treatment ends.

"If we could say this person is at risk or this person is cured, we could talk about treatment or preventive therapy," Ellner said in a press release. LAKSHMI GANDHI

Join Boston's Architecture Community

The Boston Architectural College: A leader in diversifying design education

The Boston Architectural College (BAC) is an independent, professional college in Boston's Back Bay. Our focus is to provide excellence in design education by combining classroom learning, practice, and accessibility to diverse communities. We offer professional and accredited degrees in architecture, interior architecture, landscape architecture, and design studies.

The College's School of Architecture offers professionally accredited Bachelor of Architecture and Master of Architecture degree programs that engage students in design practice and academic study concurrently. Students draw upon their academic studies and their daily workplace or community project learning as they develop their understanding and abilities in writing, drawing, speaking and creating. Students think critically about sustainable design, about social and cultural contexts, and about their own developing identity as architects.

The BAC's School of Architecture offers many options for students who are interested in pursuing a degree. The Master of Architecture degree program offers both an onsite track and a distance track, which allows students to study from anywhere while maintaining full-time professional employment through a combination of online and face-to-face learning experiences.

The Bachelor track offers both a Bachelor of Architecture as well as a Bachelor of Science in Architecture, a nine semester (4.5 year) undergraduate program that leads to an accelerated Master of Architecture degree, which can be earned at the BAC in four additional semesters. By offering a variety of options for students looking to pursue an Architecture degree, the BAC upholds its value of making a design education accessible.

MCPHS ONLINE
Massachusetts College of Pharmacy and Health Sciences

Since 1823, Massachusetts College of Pharmacy and Health Sciences (MCPHS) has been preparing students for successful healthcare careers through excellence in teaching, research, professional service, and community engagement.

We have built our reputation by offering cutting-edge academic programs and clinical affiliations with world-class healthcare institutions, many of which are here in Boston's Longwood Medical and Academic Area.

We're committed to training professionals for the ever-expanding healthcare industry, so we developed MCPHS Online, which is inspired by our rich history—but designed for right now. At MCPHS Online, you'll be taught by the same faculty, immersed in the same professional environment, and earn the same sought-after degrees you can get on our physical campus. We just deliver everything to you in a way that fits your busy lifestyle by allowing you to maintain full-time employment.

MCPHS Online's curriculum isn't comprised of correspondence courses where you'll just read, write, and email your work. Our courses are a give and take between everyone who is enrolled. We leverage the Blackboard Learn system for a more compelling classroom experience that involves sharing recorded lectures, participating in discussion forums, blogging, meeting in virtual classrooms, and accessing library resources.

We offer some unique academic programs too. Our dental hygiene bridge program is the only one in the country that allows a practicing dental hygienist with an associate degree the chance to get a master's degree. We also have cutting-edge programs in Healthcare Administration, Health Sciences, Regulatory Affairs & Health Policy, Medication & Patient Safety, Public Health, and more.

Net doesn't pay for itself

Re: 'FCC's Title II will ensure equality for us all' (Metro, Feb. 6-8) Senior undergraduate Danielle Lorentz wrote "with great concern" for the "future of [her] generation," particularly, their success as the "nation's newest members of the workforce." Indeed, upon graduating, Ms. Lorentz wants to "share [her] portfolio, contact potential clients and thrive as a freelance designer." Will her "portfolio" contain ultra-high definition (4K) videos that she wants to "share" by Internet? Probably. Then, is she willing to pay for the expensive boatload of bandwidth and expensive lightning-fast connection required to share them? Let's see. Since she passionately advocates for "net neutrality" through passage of the FCC's Title II to stop "big telecom companies" from restricting her access to unlimited Internet use, which she considers "discrimination" and an "injustice," what she appears to really want is unlimited use of the Internet without having to pay for it. That is, despite her highfalutin concerns, she wants something for nothing. And she will doubtlessly deny her larcenous intention.

Still, what's really needed is not for the FCC to ensure "net neutrality," but the "next thing" for connecting to the Internet, which will be unimaginably fast with practically unlimited bandwidth. What form it will take is currently unknown, but to develop it and make its use widespread and affordable will take money, or "capital," and lots of it. Unfortunately, this capital is largely unavailable because it's misdirected by the federal government to, for example, pay for Obama's proposed $4 trillion budget. But should the federal government greatly reduce its multi-trillion dollar spending and return the rest of the money to the private sector, chances for We the People to soon have the "next thing" for Internet connection will greatly increase. And when it comes, there will be no need for the FCC's Title II (or the FCC, for that matter), which I suppose Ms. Lorentz will find tragic. ALTON YEE, VIA EMAIL

Seguin, Stars in town

NHL. Bruins look to bounce back from rough home loss to Canadiens.

The good news for the Bruins (28-18-7) is that they won't see the Canadiens (34-15-3) again this regular season after the Habs swept the four-game regular season series against the B's with a 3-1 victory on Sunday at TD Garden. Of course, Montreal will still be giving Boston nightmares for the next few months regardless as another playoff showdown seems inevitable. Before hitting the road for a five-game road trip (Vancouver, Calgary, Edmonton, St. Louis and Chicago) that lasts almost two full weeks, Boston hosts Dallas (24-21-8) on Tuesday (7 p.m., NESN) at the Garden.

The only other time these teams met this season, on Jan. 20, the Bruins won, 3-1, in Dallas.

The Canadiens have proven to have the perfect blueprint to beat the Bruins (with speed, power plays and solid goaltending), but the Stars are the type of one-dimensional team that Boston typically owns. The Stars have scored 167 goals this season (second-most in the Western Conference), but they have allowed 172 (third-most in the West). Boston looks like a safe bet to make the playoffs but it is still only in eighth-place, while Dallas is in 11th place in the West, five points behind eighth-place Calgary. It's why Tuesday's game is so important to both clubs. They need every point that they can get.

Of course, for as long as Tyler Seguin plays for Dallas, these matchups will have extra meaning. The former No. 2 overall pick of the Bruins is currently tied for the league lead with 29 goals and 30 assists. Loui Eriksson (12 goals, 19 assists) and Reilly Smith (10 goals, 17 assists) are each having decent seasons but the debate over which team got the better end of that trade ended a long time ago. It really has to kill the Bruins' front office to see Seguin doing so well in Dallas because he is exactly what they are lacking: a speedy winger.

NHL power rankings | by Rich Slate

No. 1

Predators (35-12-6)

Carter Hutton did his job to hold the fort and now Pekka Rinne is back, so the Predators are really in good shape. Nashville has the most points in the NHL and their goal-differential is +34. The Predators kick off a four-game homestand (Lightning, Jets, Devils, Sharks) on Tuesday; they are an NHL-best 21-3-1 at Bridgestone Arena.

No. 2

Ducks (34-13-7)

Every other divisional race in the NHL is competitive except for the Pacific, which the Ducks have owned since day one this season. They are 12 points ahead of San Jose and have the second most points in the league. Ryan Getzlaf returned Sunday after missing two games with an injury.

No. 3

Lightning (34-16-5)

Few would have predicted it, but the race in the Atlantic Division has turned out to be great. Tampa is only ahead of the hard-charging Canadiens and Red Wings by two points apiece. They picked up a huge 5-3 win over Anaheim Sunday that could have been a possible Stanley Cup Finals preview.

No. 4

Red Wings (31-12-9)

The Red Wings are playing as well as anyone in the NHL. They are 9-1-0 in their last 10 games, and they have won their past three contests. Detroit has a tough week coming up as they go to Pittsburgh on Wednesday then they host Winnipeg on Saturday and Montreal on Monday.

No. 5

Blues 15-4)

The Blues are a really good team but as Sunday's 4-2 loss showed, the Blackhawks still have their number. You get the feeling that the rivals will meet again in the postseason and you have to like Chicago's chances there. St. Louis hosts Arizona on Tuesday before a trip to see Tampa on Thursday.

No. 6

Canadiens (34-15-3)

Speaking of teams that own their rivals, Montreal finished off a four-game season series sweep vs. Boston on Sunday with a 3-1 victory. The Canadiens outscored the Bruins 16-6, and Carey Price nearly put up his second shutout in a row against them.

No. 7

B'Hawks (33-18-2)

Chicago is only 5-5-0 in their last 10 games but as usual, they tend to show up in the big games such as Sunday's 4-2 win at St. Louis. They have the best goal-differential (+40) in the NHL. They begin an eight-game homestand on Monday vs. Arizona so expect them to go up from here.

No. 8

Islanders (34-18-1)

Does anyone want to win the Metropolitan Division? The Islanders were running away with it for a while but now that they have struggled (5-5-0 in their last 10, including a loss to the Flyers Thursday), it has opened the door for Pittsburgh, Washington and the Rangers to make a move.

No. 9

Penguins (30-15-8)

The Penguins ended their last road trip with an ugly 5-0 loss in Vancouver. Pittsburgh is 4-4-2 in their last 10 games so they are another club that is going through a tough stretch. A win vs. Detroit would certainly give them a big boost moving forward.

NFL

Richardson got bulky

There have been multiple stories put out over the past few months regarding running back Trent Richardson's rocky tenure in Indianapolis, but Monday's story takes (and eats) the cake. An ESPN report stated Monday that Richardson "ballooned" during the season after injuring his hamstring in Week 7. "He began the season at 225 pounds, but his weight had ballooned up to around 240 pounds later in the season, according to a source," the report stated.

SI'S SWIMSUIT ISSUE REALLY USED TO BE A BIG DEAL, SWEAR

Playing the Field

MATT BURKE
MATTHEW.BURKE@METRO.US

The annual Sports Illustrated swimsuit issue is not what it used to be. That's obvious. For years, the release of SI's second post-Super Bowl edition was one of the marquee events on the sports calendar's first quarter, right up there with the first Thursday of March Madness and Opening Day of the baseball season.

But, as video killed the radio star, the Internet killed the swimsuit model. There are no 13-year-old middle school boys waiting for hours by the mailbox on the second Wednesday in February anymore. And the window between the mailman's arrival and the time dad gets home from work is shut forever.

There is simply no skill required in viewing scantily clad women anymore. No fear of bent glossy pages. Google reigns supreme.

Of course ,there's no reason to go back in time, but it is worth telling "kids these days" the hell that Uncle Matt and other boys of my generation had to go through to catch a glimpse of America's No. 1 sports magazine's No. 1 issue of the year.

The annual issue hits the streets this week and SI is painfully trying to create cash via controversy by saying that models Robyn Lawley and Ashley Graham are "plus-size." This obviously grabs the attention of both the male and female demo as both want to (no pun) weigh in on contrived labels. It's a clever ploy by the cash-strapped SI, a magazine that laid off its entire roster of staff photographers last month (because Sports Illustrated makes sense without the 'Illustrated,' right?).

KATE UPTON
GETTY IMAGES

One smart move the mag made for its 2015 issue was getting in some photos of UFC bantamweight champ Ronda Rousey, who has appeal across the board. And of course, SI is always hoping for its next Kate Upton.

IMO, the best SI swimsuit covers of all time (aka, the iconic images that put me through puberty):

1. Tyra Banks, 1997
Before she made Wendy Williams look like a sane person by comparison, Tyra was the "it" girl for all red-blooded American males.

Kathy Ireland invented the SI swimsuit covergirl game.
GETTY IMAGES

2. Daniela Pestova, 1995
Brought the nipple to the national stage nearly a decade before Janet Jackson.

3. Kathy Ireland, Elle Macpherson, Rachel Hunter 1994 The undisputed queens of the SI swimsuit issue, this trio laid the foundation. It's obvious now that this whole deal was a Pacquiao – Mayweather scenario in terms of career timing, but nonetheless, it worked.

Don't Love the hypocrisy

So, Kevin Love apparently doesn't like Cleveland enough to stay. It's been rumored for a while now that Love is unhappy and given that the Cavs aren't exactly blowing the doors off of teams like they had been expected to do entering the 2014-15 season, he may flee this summer.

Love's teammate LeBron James tweeted out Saturday night, "Stop trying to find a way to FIT-OUT and just FIT-IN. Be a part of something special! Just my thoughts."

Love had told ESPN earlier in the year that he wanted to "fit out" and just be himself and not try so hard to "fit in."

Of course if there's one person who should be the authority on trying to "fit in" in order to stay put, long term, in northeast Ohio, it is LeBron.

RAY ALLEN
GETTY IMAGES

Allen to decide on future soon

The "will he?" or "won't he?" surrounding 10-time NBA All-Star Ray Allen is about to come to an end. The 39-year-old shooting guard is still a free agent after playing last season with the Heat, but ESPN reported Monday that Allen will make a decision on whether or not to return for a 19th NBA season shortly after this weekend's All-Star festivities in New York.

According to ESPN, the Wizards, Cavaliers, Warriors, Spurs, Heat, Clippers and Hawks are all interested in acquiring Allen. METRO

Bills: Incognito has changed

The Buffalo Bills officially signed former Miami Dolphins offensive guard Richie Incognito Monday and said that he is a changed man. Incognito was at the center of a bullying scandal in 2013 and was suspended for the final eight games of that season. He did not play in the league in 2014.

"We are convinced that Richie is prepared to move forward and has and will continue to take the necessary steps to improve himself as a person and a teammate," said Bills owner Terry Pegula. METRO

Sullinger, Crowder coming on strong for Celtics

Congratulations, you survived the first Sunday after football season.

Depressing, isn't it?

While nothing will quite compare to the Patriots' Super Bowl run, all is not lost when it comes to Boston sports.

While we don't see a Celtics championship in the near future, there's reason to be optimistic about where the team is heading.

So what have you missed in regards to the Green Team while you analyzed the Patriots and PSI? A lot, actually.

Rajon Rondo and Jeff Green are gone. So, who's running the show on Causeway Street now? It isn't just one guy, but a name does rise to the top over the others: Jared Sullinger.

Despite arriving to the TD Garden late before two recent home games and forcing Brad Stevens to bench him at the start of each game, Sullinger has stepped into more of a featured role — especially recently. He's averaging 18.8 points, 7.8 rebounds, and 4.8 assists over the last four games, in which the Celtics have gone 3-1.

Stevens is running more plays through Sullinger, while also encouraging him to shoot more — though we could do with less 3-pointers (28.7 percent from 3-point range).

In addition to Sullinger, forward Jae Crowder has impressed as of late.

Crowder was one of three players who came over from Dallas in the Rondo deal, and he's the only player still on the team. That's because both Danny Ainge and Stevens really like what Crowder, a three-year NBA veteran, brings to the Celtics.

Jared Sullinger, left, and Jae Crowder, right, have the Celtics within striking distance for a playoff spot. / GETTY IMAGES

His numbers on the season don't jump out at you — 5.5 points, 0.9 assists, and 2.3 rebounds — but like Sullinger, Crowder has had a strong late January and early February, averaging 12 points and 5.5 rebounds over the last four games.

What those numbers don't show is the energy and defense Crowder displays out on the court, as the Celtics as a team are clamping down on opponents. Over the last 11 games, opponents have only reached 100 points three times.

Of course, another big part of that is the defense played from Boston's now-starting backcourt of rookie Marcus Smart and Avery Bradley.

It's no coincidence that since Smart took over the starting gig four games ago, the team has played a better brand of basketball — and just in time for your viewing pleasure.

"Guys in here are trying to win," Crowder said last Friday after a Celtics win over the Sixers. "A lot of people counted us out, so we have a lot of pride in this locker room and the city has a lot of pride so we want to keep playing for those guys, playing for ourselves and playing basketball the right way to give ourselves a chance."
